A ROUND OF TALK.

Why The Editor Swore.

With a terrible cold in his head,
And eyelids heavy and sore,
An editor sat in his broken chair
And bitterly, earnestly swore.

A youth had dropped 'n with a poem,
A man was there with a dun.
And a chap had dropped in to tell him
How the paper ought to be run.

An irate subscriber had told him
His sheet wasn't fit to be read,
While another carefully promises
He will punch the editor's head.

The foreman was yelling for copy
And the wind whistled in at the door
And this, with a few other reasons,
Is why the editor swore.

But the angel that took it to heaven.
Recorded his verdict there,
"The jury finds in the present case
'Twas a justifiable swear."
—Boot and Shoe Worker.

ROADS — Every citizen of the county and, in fact, everybody who has occasion to travel through the county is intereted in the road question. The hauling of tobacco and other products over the roads this past winter and spring has had a very telling effect on the roads and they need work badly and immediately, As soon as the harvest is over and the farmer has more time to devote to the matter all will be called on to work the roads and every citizen with the proper spirit in him should join in the effort to redeem the roads of Washington county from their present condition. As an exchange aptly expresses it: "Good roads, like good streets make habitation along them desirable. They economize time and force in the transportation of products, reduce wear and tear on horses, harness and vehicles and enhance the market value of real estate. They raise the value of farm lands and farm products and tend to beautify the country through which they pass "

MANAGEMENT — As there appears to be some misunderstanding among the farmers about the overseer system governing the turnpikes and dirt roads throughout the county we give the plan adopted by the Fiscal Court concerning that point. The office of overseer for turnpike is practically done away with or at least the duties of the overseer have been curtailed so far as distributing money appropriated for road purposes is concerned. The Magistrate is held responsible for the condition of the turnpike in his magisterial district. The dirt roads of the county remain under the old system. The overseers are retained and they are expected to handle the road fund of their respective districts and to give orders as before on the county treasurer. The road fund is limited and it is expected that every good citizen will supplement the resources by giving extra work until the roads in his neighborhood are put in first-class condition for travel.

ALUMNAE — An interesting feature of the exercises at St. Catherines yesterday was the fourth annual reunion of the Alumnae Association composed of many of the old graduates of that institution. This is the eightieth annual commencement of St. Catherine and some very old graduates are among the members of the Alumnae Association which numbers about 122. The most notable and about the oldest member present was Mrs J. M. Barbour of Louisville who graduated from St. Catherines in the year 1849. Mrs. Barbour holds the office of Honorary President. The meeting of the Alumnae was celebrated by addresses and papers from various members.

PLEASED — The citizens generally along the various routes of the proposed free rural delivery a repleased at the prospect of having their mail brought to their doors and the chances are that the system will prove satisfactory. There will doubtless however, be kickers developed just as in other enterprises, but it is notreasonable to suppose that there will be any material opposition to the service. Every one wishing to have the service will be required to put in a regulation mail box at a small expense but the matter of taking the service is not compulsory as some suppose. If a man does not get any mail and does not want to get any, of course he will not be compelled to put in a box, but if he wishes to have his mail delivered he must put in a box. A well known citizen who in the opinion of his wife at any rate, is much too fond of going to town anyway, has been heard to register a strong kick against the free delivery scheme, He says that the inauguration of the new mail service will cause him many sleepless nights in thinking up excuses to get to town when heretofore he had a good standing excuse—that of going after the mail.

HARVEST—Wheat harvest in the county begun this week and the indications are that the period of reaping will be of short duration. The wheat crop is the shortest that has been known for years in Washington county and unless other cereals turn out well in order to even up matters the farmers will be a little short on grain this season. The hard winter and later the ravages of the cut worms are said to be responsible for the shortage in wheat.

Those Routes.

Mr. H G. Rising in company with Post master Waters of Springfield, was here Monday in conference with Postmaster Conway in reference to one of the rural free delivery mail routes recently selected out of this city. It seems that the citizens of Springfield are of the opinion that the route leading out the St. Rose pike is encroaching on their rights to the extent that Springfield should be the distributing point instead of Lebanon, consequently they have sent a vigorous protest to Congressman Smith against the route starting from here. The result of this protest may be the abolishing of this route altogether. The people along the route signed the petition calling for Lebanon as the distributing point and the question seems to us merely a case of "the early bird catching the worm." The distance of the route in this county is two miles in excess of that which lies in Washington. It is not known definitely when any of the routes will be in operation. Two other routes in the county have been favarably reported, one going out of Riley and the other out of Gravel Switch.—Lebanon Enterprise.

State Fair Work.

The Executive Committee of the Kentucky Live Stock Breeders' Association has been hard at work this week with preliminary arrangements for the State Fair to be held the week of September 22d. In addition to the superintendents, whose appointments were noted last week, Mr. James L. Gay, of Woodford, was this week appointed Superintendent of Saddle Horse Department. At the meeting of the Board of Directors held June 2d Mr. Gay was elected a member of the board to fill the vacancy occasioned by the resignation of Mr. R. M. Smith. Mr J. N. Harper, of the Kentucky Experiment Station, has been appointed Superintendent of Grain and Field Seeds. One prospective exhibitor of horses has written to engage 50 stalls for his exhibit this year.

DESPERATE.

Fight During Civil War in Nelson County.

Much has been written lately about the notorious Ed Terrell and his desperate deeds in this section. To a correspondent at Black's, Kentucky we are indepted for the following account of an encounter between Terrell and Marion near Chaplin.

On the morning of April 11, 1865, Captain Ed Terrell with a squad of Federal soldiers met Bill Marion and his band of guerrillas at Barker's Lane about two miles from Chaplin Owing to the topography of the country the two companies did not see each other until only a few yards intervened between them and the meeting was a complete surprise to both.

Terrell and Marion swore at each other roundly for a few moments when Terrell turned to his men and gave the well uncerstood order. "Give them hell, boys." A fusilade of shots followed, and both parties attempted to reach the shelter of the Barker residence and barn. Terrell's men succeeded in reaching the desired place first, from where a desultory fire was kept up all day which was returned by Marion and his men. James Brooks, one of Terrell's men received a mortal wound. Harry Thompson was badly wounded and several of the horses were shot.

Towards nightfall Terrell's ammunition became exhausted and the guerrillas during the lull were preparing to burn the house and barn by piling hay against the walls when Terrell succeeded in dispatching a messenger to Bloomfield for reenforcements. Scott's company, which was located there went to his relief and Terrell escaped capture.

The dead Brooks and wounded Thompson were placed in carriages and guarded by Scott's company and Terrell and his men set out for Bloomfield Marion and his men followed and harrassed them all the way.

Two of Terrell's men who were engaged in the conflict were Joseph Taylor and Ben Stevens, who are now residents of Spencer county. Balls can be found in great numbers in the vicinity of the battle at this late day.

Near the scene of the battle stands a wild cherry tree upon which the noted guerilla, Ben Forman hung a negro.

Robert Barker at whose residence the fight between Terrell's and Marion's men occured was very wealthy but he with his entire family have passed away, and the buildings have been destroyed.

Terrell's most daring deed and the one that made him famous was the capture of Quantrill and his band of guerillas. About May, 1965 Quantrill and his men established their rendevous in Nelson and Spencer counties. They were among sympathizers and frequently visited Bardstown and Taylorsville, None, however, save a few knew this was the famous Quantrill, as he travelled under the name of Capt William Clark.

On May 10 1865, Quantrill and his men started on a mounted expedition. After leaving Taylorsville they rode to the county home of Mr. James Wakefield. Here they partook of dinner and fed their horses in a barn near the house

Terrel had received permission from the government to hunt Quantrill, Sue Monday and others, The same day that Quantrill left Taylorsville Terrell and his guerrillas out on a scouting expedition discovered cavalry tracks a few miles out of Taylorsville. A colored boy whom they met informed them that Clark (Quantrill) with his men were at Wakefield's barn just over the hill. Terrell summoned his men, who outnumbered Quantrill's three to one, He led them cautiously to the summit of the hill and halted while a man was sent ahead to reconnoiter. The scout reported that the guerrillas were lounging in the barn and their horses tied to nearby fences.

Terrell gave the order to move and when the crest of the hill was reached commanded his men to charge down upon the barn. The action was brief and decisive. Quantrill was sleeping in the haymow at the time Others of his men were lounging around the barn.

Terrell's men came down on them like a hurricane. Quantrill sprang to his feet at the first alarm and when he saw the number of the enemy he ordered his men to scatter. Most of the horses stampeded and the men were compelled to trust to their feet,

Unfortunately for Quantrill he had on that day left his horse behind and was riding a thoroubred loaned to him by a lady admirer, The animal was unused to fire arms and was off before the guerrilla could reach him.

Some of the men who succeeded in reaching their steeds begged him to mount but he refused Then one of the men tried to get Quantrill on behind him but he fell and jumping to his feet started to run,

He had scarcely proceeded a hundred yards, before one of Terrell's men singled him out and ran his horse towards him, He rode furiously until within a few paces of the guerrilla leader and reining his horse with his left hand with a forty-four colts navy in his right, he took a quick aim and fired. Quantrel threw up his hands and fell face downwards, mortally wounded. He with two dead comrades, was carried into Wakefield's home. The remainder of Quantrell's men escaped.

For the privilege of being left at Wakefield's until he should die or recover Quantrill paid Terrell $500 in gold and Wakefield guaranteed that Terrell should keep his part of the contract. But higher authority than Terrell's prevailed and ordered Quantrill removed Two days later he was placed in a spring wagon by order of Gen, John Palmer and driven to Louisville where he was placed in a Military Hospital. The bullet struck Quantrill at the shoulder blade, fracturing the spinal column and went deep into his vitals. The lower portion of his body was paralized and remained so until his death which occured June 5. 1865. His remains were interred in the Catholic cemetery in Louisville which faith he embraced before he died. In order to guard against grave robbers Father Powers, who had charge of the remains had them buried within twenty feet of the cemetery superintendant's residence and the mound leveled to the ground and sodded over.—Bardstown Standard,

CAUTION!

This is not a gentle word but when you think how liable you are not to purchase for 75 cents the only remedy universally and a remedy that has had the largest sale of any medicine in the world since 1868 for the cure and treatment of consumption and Throat and Lung troubles without losing its great popularity all these years, you will be thankful we called your attention to Boschee's German Syrup. There are so many ordinary cough remidies made by druggists and others that are cheap and good for light colds perhaps, but for severe Coughs Bronchitis, Croup and especially for Consumption where there is difficult expectoration and coughing during the nights and morning, there is nothing like German Syrup. Sold by all druggists in the civilized world.

How Cheep Baking Powder Is Made.

The Health Department of New York has seized a quantity of so-called cheap baking powder which it found in that city. Attention was attracted to it by the low price at which it was sold in department stores. Samples were taken and the chemist of the Health Department reported the stuff to be "an alum powder" which analysis showed it to be composed of alum and pulverized rock cheifly,

The powder was declared to to be dangerous to health and several thousand pounds were carted to the offal dock and destroyed.

It is unsafe to experiment with there so called "cheap" articles of food. They are sure to be made from alum, rock or other injurious matter. In baking powders, the high class cream of tarter brands are the most economical becuaee they go farther in use and are healthful beyond question.

Obituaries.

One of the most delicate questions newspaper men have to handle is that of publishing obituaries. All newspapers are willing and anxious to print notices of deaths occurring in the community, including such eulogies as are appropriate, immediately after the death occurs, in which case they are valuable news items. But when months or years afterwards a family wants an obituary printed in order to get a copy to paste in a scrap book they bring it to the county paper with a request to print. It is then of interest to but very few of the paper's readers, and, as the general newspaper rule is to print nothing unless it is of interest to at least ten per cent of its readers, such matter must be necessarily omitted unless printed at advertising rates. We trust this will explain fully to our readers why we want death notices (printed at the time of the death) and why we cannot print "obituaries" given to us months or years afterwards in order to get one copy for the family scrap book, one being a news item, the other not.—LaRue Herald.

as a candidate for the office of Clerk of the Washington Circuit Court subject to the action of the Democratic party.

Editor and candidate W, P Walton who has been raising the cry of "snap" methods against the Democratic committe of the Second Railroad district because of their call for an early convention says that he will withdraw from the race if the members of the convention will swear to the statement that they were not prompted in their action to favor Charlie McChord's interest in the contest. The members of the committee might demand of Walton to know what assurance they would have that he would not break his aggrement as he appears to have done the one contained in that telegaam to the committee promising to abide by any action the committee might take in regard to calling the convention.

This is verily an age of cliques and trusts all after the poor man's scalp. The latest is that a bull clique, reported to be headed by John W. PULLIAM

Prof, Ben Crouch says that Mark Shewmaker of this village has the best crop of wheat in this community.

Mr. Editor. I have just finished setting a crop of tobacco of 4 acres, I want the subscribers of the NEWS-LEADER to pray that the days may not be too hot, the worms too numerous and Lazy Laurence deal sparingly with me until the crop is matured.

Mr. John Mayes who has been clerk at Pulliam for several years says that some one recently stole an old fashioned skillet and lid and he thinks the person who took it wanted to perpetuate the memory of their grandmother, who reared her family on bread cooked in these quaint old utensils.

Mr. W. P. Ryan of this place says that the grandest collection of old antiquated plows one eyer saw is owned by Richard Young of this place, among which may be mentioned Monkey plows, mold-board plows and many others These plows, Mr, Ryan says seem to have been sharpened about the year 1860, and used continuously to the dawn of the 20th century.

Mr. W, P. Ryan and James Dennis of Pulliam report a successful expedition on Choplin Run last week. Mr, Ryan says that they used all persuasion to obtain some of the finny tribe but failed to catch any except one little sucker, and after staying two days they made for home, firmly beleiving that the Tatham Springs "Fishin" club have succeeded in successfully hypnotising the fish in Tatham pond.

Mr. C. C, Foster our merchant at Pulliam and D. W. Crouch of Brush Grove the venerable constable. are expected to have trouble when they meet. The affair is to be regretted yet the citizens here sympathize with Crouch. It seems that Foster was riding along the highway recently and a lady addressed him as Mr, D, W Crouch. He unthoughtedly spoke of the matter to some confidential friend and Crouch has heard of the matter and is greatly angered,

Spring fever

Spring fever is another name for billiousness. It is more serious than most people think. A torpid liver and inactive bowels mean a poisoned system. If neglected, serious illness may follow such symptoms. DeWitts Little Early Risers remove all danger by stimulating the liver, opening the bowels and cleanse the system of impurities. Safe pills. Never gripe. "I have taken DeWitts Little Early Risers for torpid liver every spring for years, writes R E Everly, Moundsville W. Va. and they do me more good than anything I ever tried. WON THE FILIPINOS.

How Major Gardener Won Success as Governor of Tayabas.

Major Cornelius Gardener, who is now on his way from the Philippines to testify before the senate committee concerning reported atrocities in the provinces of Tayabas, Laguna, Batangas and Samar, was formerly civil governor of the province of Tayabas. Major Gardener in his report as governor has criticised the acts of the military force in his province, and for that reason the senate committee requested Secretary Root to direct the officer to appear in Washington to testify.

Major Gardener has been one of the most popular officers in the Philippines.

MAJOR CORNELIUS GARDENER.

He is a native of Michigan and a graduate of West Point. He was with General Miles during his Indian campaigns and there gained much valuable experience in bushwhacking methods of fighting.

When the Spanish war broke out, Governor Pingree made him colonel of a Michigan regiment. Later he went to the Philippines and at the head of his regiment marched into the city of Tayabas and took possession after a sharp skirmish.

One year later these formerly hostile natives gave Major Gardener one of the most enthusiastic and cordial demonstrations ever accorded in the Philippines to an American wearing the army uniform. It was on the occasion of his departure from the province, to which he was destined to return as civil governor. Hundreds of the most prominent natives gathered to bid him farewell. Young girls read addresses in his praise. He was escorted to the cathedral by the padre. A ball and supper were given in his honor, and American and native flags were swung from the houses and stores along the way.

Major Gardener took no military escort and went unarmed, but a loyal population guarded him and testified their regard. It was a personal triumph for the major and remarkable testimony of his kindly rule and unselfish work for pacification. When he went back as governor, he was hailed with the same enthusiasm.

Major Gardener possesses great executive ability and has all the qualities necessary to successful military leadership. He is now about fifty years old.

How He Failed.

"Was your son a success on the board of trade?"

"Hardly," replied the disgruntled father. "He tried to run a corner the first thing, but he picked out the wrong commodity."

"What did he try to corner?"

"Wild oats, as near as I can make out and it looks to me as if he had paid for nearly the whole crop raised that year."—Chicago Post.

The Word Treacle.

The word treacle has undergone an odd modification. At first it was applied to such decoctions of roots or other substances as were deemed beneficial in medical practice; then, as these were frequently sweetened, it came to mean any sweet concoction or confection, and lastly, as molasses was the sweetest of all, this name was exclusively applied to sirup.

THE COMING JULIET.

Great Things Predicted For Mabel Taliaferro, the Child Actress.

Mabel Taliaferro, the child actress whom the late James A. Herne predicted would be the next great Juliet, is attracting much attention from the stars of her profession. She is attending an exclusive school for girls at Springfield, Mass., at present, where she was recently visited by Maude Adams, who became deeply interested in the young girl and has since been her warm friend. Miss Ethel Barrymore has also paid her marked attention.

Little Miss Taliaferro is thirteen years old and tiny even for that inconsiderable age. She is a blond and has slightly irregular features and pathetic eyes. She has been called "a miniature Maude Adams" and Eleanor Duse in temperament. She has been playing since she was an infant.

Her best work thus far was done in "The Children of the Ghetto" and "The Price of Peace."

The Reason.

"Then, when you have finished your lecture," said the professor of elocution and deportment to young Dulle, "bow gracefully and leave the platform on tiptoe."

"Why on tiptoe?" queried Dulle.

"So as not to wake the audience," replied the professor.

An Amusing Pearl.

A bull of beeswax introduced into the shell of a living fresh water mussel has resulted in producing the most remarkable artificial pearl in existence. It is about an inch and a half in length, oval in form and pink in color and is now the property of the Smithsonian institution. The ball of wax was placed near the hinge of the bivalve, which, being kept in a tank of fresh water, was carefully watched. The irritation of the wax caused the mollusk to protect itself by coating the foreign object with a smooth coating of pearl stuff—the same material as that which is used to line the inner surface of its shell.

It is the case in question the result was an enormous pearl. Owing to pressure, however, the wax ball lost its spherical shape and became oval in form. At the end of two years the mussel was taken out of the tank and opened and the pearl removed. The next afterward contracting, owing to the heat, which caused the pearl shell to crack. This accident, while destroying the commercial value of the pearl, made it possible to observe the thickness of the nacreous covering, which is somewhat greater than that of an ordinary sheet of letter paper. If the pearl were not flawed it would be worth a enormous sum of money, but even as it is it is a prodigy as a curiosity.—Washington Star.

How Lovely Lettuce Looks.

"I see," one said jokingly as she poised her basket in front of her pretty chin with a thoughtful air, "to get some lettuce."

"You're right," said the marketman. "Here's some. Very nice it is too."

"Is it all that color?"

"Why—er—yes'm. All lettuce is green, you know."

"Oh, of course! But it's too bad! I got a lovely blue dish to put lettuce in, but I'm sure pink would look horrible in it. I never thought about there not being any shades, you know."

And as she turned away the marketman was almost thrown into a fear of disappointment in her age.

The Anchor.

"Captain," remarked the nuisance on shipboard who always asks foolish questions, "what is the object in throwing the anchor overboard?"

"Young man," replied the old salt, "do you understand the theory of seismic disturbances? Well, we throw the anchor overboard to keep the ocean from slopping away in the fog. See?"—Baltimore News.

Night Are Most Hard.

Experience indicates that accidents are far more likely to occur to the right eye than to the left, and the further evidence of this fact is supplied by the makers of artificial limbs. They dispose of many more appliances to the right side of body than they do to the left.

Statistics show that in fifty-four cases out of a hundred the left leg is stronger than the right.

Domestic Anecdotes.

"Your papa likes dogs, I see," remarked the visitor.

"Oh, no!" replied the boy.

"Then why does he keep so many about the house?"

"I guess it's 'cause mamma doesn't like 'em."—Philadelphia Record.

Literary Improvement.

Rev. Paul Price the evangelist is conducting a meeting at the Baptist church this week. Quite a number of accessions have already been made to the church and the meetings are being largely attended and are growing in interest.

Jim Moran and Ben McElroy, two colored men who have been carrying the hod for the work on the new hotel building became engaged in a scrap on Monday afternoon when Ben struck Jim over the head with a brick, shattering the brick and cutting a long gash in the negro's head.

Sun Brothers circus exhibited here on last Monday. That the people in the community were circus hungry was clearly shown by the big crowds that attended this show at both performances. The circus was a rather small affair, but was probably well worth the money. They have no menagerie but the performance given was good enough as far as it went. The show moved on from here to Perryville.

Sheriff Byron Croake and deputy Sidney Osborne left yesterday on the morning train in charge of Ben Spratt and Jessie Terrell, convicted and sentenced at the last term of court to serve two years in the penitentiary for horse stealing. The case is a familiar one to the readers of the NEWS-LEADER. The offence occured about a year and a half ago and although the evidence of the young men's guilt was convincingly strong from the start the case was so hard fought in the courts that numerous delays resulted. A good deal of sympathy is felt for the relatives of the young men, who by their wild and reckless lives have brought this disgrace on a good name. It is said that Governor Beckham was appealed to for a pardon but it was not granted.

Missionary Work.

The following letter which is self explanatory has been received from Rev. Miles Saunders who is doing missionary work in the mountains of eastern Kentucky:

Eskatawa, Breathett Co., Ky.
June 13.

If the Presbyterian Missionary Society of Springfield could know the delight they have given to a mission school in the mountains by sending up an organ they would feel amply repaid. It is a delight and a profit, not only to the children but the whole community. It is doubtless helping to train services for the choir above. Let your prayers accompany your donation, good ladies and the blessing of God will rest upon you and the school With thanks, Your old friend and patron.

Yankey-Carter.

One of the season's prettiest events was the occasion of the marriage of Miss Mary Hartford Yankey to the Rev. Jordon Witt Carter at the home of the bride's father Wednesday at 11 o'clock. The parlor was prettily decorated and the soft light from the pale blue tapers made the effect very charming indeed. The bridal party entered to the strains of Mendelsahons wedding march played by Miss Humphrey.

The groom and his best man Mr. Orland Benson Beck of Stanford, were met at the foot of the stairs by Miss Rena Yankey and her mother and the bride on the arm of her father. The mantle was banked with palms and potted flowers. and vines were arranged to form a beautiful bower, under which the ceremony was performed by the Rev. C. M Humphrey.

During the ceremony "Call Me Thine Own" was softly played and the party left the parlor to the Lohengrin bridal march. The bride was charmingly gowned in Paris mull and Duchess lace, while the maid of honor wore Persian mull trimmed with satin ribbon

Soon after the ceremony the bride reappeared in a handsome tailored gown of blue cloth and the party at once drove to Lebanon where they took the train for Louisville.

The bride is the young daughter of Mr. J. Sweeney Yankey and is a typical Kentucky beauty, quite popular wherever she is known.

Mr Carter is an evangalist of the Southern Methodist church an earnest preacher, a young man of great promise and is certainly to be congratulated on having won so estimable a companion. The bride was handsomely remembered by her friends with many beautiful and useful tokens of regard.

After spending a few days in Louisville, Mr. and Mrs. Carter will be entertained by the groom's parents at Gratz, Ky., then they will go to their future home at Morehead Ky.

AN INTERNATIONAL TOWN.

Peculiarities of Nogales, on the Mexican Border Line.

It would be incorrect to date a letter from either Nogales, Ariz., or Nogales, Mex., alone, for the town belongs so thoroughly and completely to both that neither half is a town at all. It is the most completely and curiously international place that can be conceived of. There is no separation of the two parts visible as you look down on the town from the hills, and the life and the ordinary traffic of the place flow back and forth with no one apparently to say them nay. However, it must not be supposed that there is free trade across the thoroughfare, which on one side is called International street and on the other the Calle Internacional.

In the middle of the street, where the Calle Elias, or main business street, crosses the international avenue, stands a stone obelisk about twelve feet high, and in the vicinity of this are always one or two guards in civilian dress, who pay no attention to empty handed passersby, but will stop any carriage or any person who offers to cross with a burden that might contain dutiable material. Occasionally on the Mexican side one sees a Mexican soldier in uniform, but the cuartel near by is too small to hold more than a small detachment, and neither soldiers nor uniformed customs guards are ever in evidence along the border.

The Americans live apart from one another in individual groups of all grades, most of which are very neat and some of which are quite fine and must have been costly. Their streets run up the sides of the mountain glen in which the town is situated. In among their houses are the adobe cabins of the Mexicans, who are their hewers of wood and drawers of water (these terms being literally correct here, for the fuel of the country is knotted and gnarled wood, brought from the hills on donkeys' backs, and the town water won't run up to the higher elevations).

AT NINE O'CLOCK

It was Sir William Colville of Colville Manor who first discovered Signor Albano. Sir William prided himself on being the patron of struggling genius and so gave him the commission to perpetuate in marble the beauty of his only daughter, the Lady Margaret.

The sculptor was a man of twenty-eight with a fair face and an aristocratic bearing. There could be no question that he was a real artist with the chisel. His enthusiasm promised a masterpiece. It was arranged that he should stay at the manor while his work was in progress.

It proved a lengthy task, but the sittings were anything but tiresome to the young lady. Signor Albano was both well traveled and well read, and, while he knew how to keep the moments from dragging, he yet preserved his attitude of deepest respect. Lady Margaret looked upon him with reverence as a genius. Perhaps his youth and good looks contributed somewhat to her enjoyment in the sittings, but this pride forbade her to acknowledge. The bust when finished was all that he had promised. If either of the two young people sighed that the long mornings in the studio would be no more, they gave no sign.

Three months afterward the father and daughter were passengers on a steamer for the orient. They had been out three days before they discovered that the sculptor was on board. He explained that through the death of a relative he had come into a fortune and had set out on a tour around the world. Sir William was rather chagrined to find his protege so far beyond the need of his help. While he congratulated him on his good fortune, therefore, his manner yet conveyed the fact that he did not consider that his change in prospects entitled him to treatment as an equal. The Lady Margaret was a most well brought up young woman, and she unhesitatingly followed her father's cue.

Two days later, as she sat alone on deck, Signor Albano approached her with the assurance of an old friend and entered into conversation. In vain her manner showed him that the old days of happy intercourse must be forgotten. The Italian was imperturbable. When she rose to go, he even dared to lay a hand upon her arm as he said:

"DID YOU NOT RECEIVE PAYMENT IN FULL FOR YOUR WORK?"

"Lady Margaret, I am here on this steamer today because I knew you were to sail on it. I am here to say something to you, and you cannot go until I have spoken."

The girl had snatched away her arm and faced him proudly as she drawled in her haughtiest insolence:

"Did you not receive payment in full for your work?"

A look of such poignant suffering crossed his mobile face that a flush of shame rose to her own cheeks.

His voice was full of reproach as he replied:

"It is kind to taunt me with the fact that I had to sell my genius for shillings and pence? You were not so when you were my model. You were not only pleased with my work as an artist, but I fondly hoped that I had found favor in your eyes as a man."

Perhaps her heart responded to his words, but only pride of race showed in her voice as she answered hotly, "Sir, have you lost your senses?" and walked away like an injured queen.

Half an hour later the wrathy Sir William hunted up the sculptor and said:

"Should you speak to my daughter again while this voyage lasts I will appeal to the captain to have you locked up in your stateroom."

"Sir William," replied Signor Albano respectfully, but imploringly, "do not drive me to desperation."

But Sir William refused to listen.

For the next few days Lady Margaret often felt his sad, imploring eyes fixed upon her, but he did not again venture to approach her.

The fifth evening a note was delivered at her door. Almost immediately following Signor Albano made his appearance in the smoking room. He carried a revolver in his hand. His face was pale and his eyes blazing.

"Gentlemen," he said to the dozen loungers in the room, "I must trouble you to go out. In the next half hour I may receive a note. If I do, all will be well; if I do not, we will all go to the bottom together at exactly 9 o'clock."

There was a hurried scuttling of the smokers. The whole ship was soon in commotion, discussing plans for his destruction. But he was armed and evidently mad and hence must be cajoled rather than forced.

At quarter to 9 he called to the white jacketed young colored saloon door: "Gentlemen, we have fifteen minutes left. A waiter every one not to hasten the calamity by tampering with my stateroom door. If you open that door, you will explode thirty pounds of dynamite at once."

There was something theatrical about it all, and yet the menace in the Italian's voice brought a shiver. The captain made a sign to the ship's carpenter, and they silently went below. Avoiding the fatal door, the carpenter feverishly began work on the room partition. It seemed hours before he had cut a hole large enough to allow his body to slip through. Just clear of the door was the signor's steamer trunk. Two wires ran from the door to the trunk, and from the interior came a noise like the ticking of a clock. When the wires had been cut, the captain said:

"Softly, now. Up with the cover. Ah! Here is the clockwork, and a handkerchief among the wheels does the business."

At the same moment the report of a revolver rang out. Up in the saloon the clock was pointing to 9. The mad lover had pressed the weapon to his temple, pulled the trigger and fallen back a corpse. The white faced passengers waited tremblingly for another report, but instead they heard a woman's cry. The Lady Margaret had fallen, fainting, in the doorway.

Was there dynamite in the trunk? Truly ninety pounds of it. But for the coolness of the captain 400 lives would have been sacrificed to the disappointment of a madman.

And did the Lady Margaret yield at the last moment? That is the secret locked in her own proud heart.

NILE RIVER MUD.

The Salvation of the Country in That Ratsbeen District.

There is nothing to make one realize the importance of mud indeed like a journey up the Nile when the inundation is just over. You lounge on the deck of your dahabieh and drink in geography almost without knowing it. The voyage forms a perfect introduction to the study of sedulogy and suggests to the observant mind (meaning you and me) the real nature of mud as nothing else on earth that I know of can suggest it, for in Egypt you get your phenomenon isolated, as it were, from all disturbing elements.

You have no rainfall to bother you, no local streams, no complex denudation. The Nile does it all, and the Nile does everything. On either hand stretches away the bare desert, rising up in gray, rocky hills. Down the midst runs the one long line of alluvial soil—in other words, Nile mud—which alone supports cultivation and life in that rainless district. The country bases itself absolutely on mud. The crops are raised on it, the houses and villages are built of it, the land is manured with it, the very air is full of it. The crude brick buildings that dissove in dust are Nile mud solidified, the roll pottery of Assiout is Nile mud baked hard, the village mosques and minarets are Nile mud whitewashed. I have even seen a ship's bulwarks neatly repaired with mud. It pervades the whole land, when wet, as mud undisguised; when dry, as duststorm.—Cornhill Magazine.

Arabian Coffee.

The Arabian coffee maker, having prepared his fire of charcoal and placed near it a huge pot containing water, takes a few handfuls of green coffee berries, carefully culls out all imperfect berries and foreign substances and then places the best of the berries in an iron ladle held over the fire. The berries are permitted to roast until they begin to smoke and are then, while still uncharred, placed in a small mortar and carefully brayed with a pestle closely fitting the cup of the mortar.

The berries are also thus reduced to a dust. While this process has been going on, a small pot has been half filled with tepid water from the large pot and placed over the fire. When the water in the small pot has begun to boil, the broken coffee berries are thrown in, and nothing is permitted to go on for a short time, the decoction being stirred with a spoon when it shows signs of boiling over. The coffee is then served in small cups without cream or sugar.

Proceeding With Caution.

"Are you sure that your arguments are calculated to impress people with your punctilious principles?"

"I don't want to impress 'em too strongly with my punctiliousness," answered Senator Sorghum. "If anybody is willing to sell out, I don't want him to feel scared about making a proposition."—Washington Star.

"And now they have to live in a little house in the suburbs."

"What a change! How she must feel it!"

"Yes. She is so much changed that even her best friends would not recognize her. I met her in the street today and did not know her at all, poor thing."

Lebanon Locals.

From the Falcon.

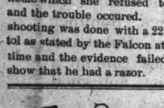

The negro excursion came through on schedule time Sunday. The authorities at Greensburg refused to allow it to come there, so Campbellsville received the heavy end of the burden. We hope the health officers will not be called upon to quarantine even so much as one case of small pox as a result of this "outing"

Yesterday afternoon an aggregation of boys went from Lebanon to Springfield to play a game of base ball. Upon arriving on the scene of action they found that team ready for them and our boys were treated to a severe trouncing, the score being 28 to 16 in favor of Springfield. Cheer up, boys, and begin practice. The victors will be giving themselves airs over their victory for the next two months.

The trial of Dan Horton on a peace warrant sworn out by his sister was held Saturday, Judge Cooper concluded that the evidence was sufficient to hold him and placed his bond at $100. Upon his failure to give the bond, he was sent to jail where he remained until yesterday when his attorney swore out a writ of habeas corpus before Judge Thomas. The writ was overruled and Dan gave his bond. However, he didn.t return to his home until after he had sworn out peace warrants for several of the parties who testified against him.

A unique suit was tried before Judge Cooper yesterday. Bridgewater, O'Daniel & Co., shipped a car load of sheep from Greensburg to this place on March 18, last. On the way the train was delayed about two hours and when it arrived here late that night there were thirteen sheep dead. The others were removed from the car, but the dead ones were left until the next morning when the owners expected to remove the wool from the carcases Before their return next morning the railroad people had taken the dead sheep and interred them in the potter's field. Bridgewater, O'Daniel & Co., then filed suit against the L. & N R. R. to recover the valne of the wool. During the trial one of the L. & N's witnesses swore they had been buried in "clean dirt." but the Judge thought different and gave the plaintiffs a verdict of $18.75.

The examining trial of Mr. J. R. Thompson for shooting his son-in-law, Mr. Wm. McCauly, was called in the County Court Monday with Judge Cooper presiding. The case was fought hard on both sides and consumed the whole of two days. The court held Mr. Thompson over and fixed his bond at $200 which he gave at once and was released from custody. The evidence as brought out during the trial was substantially as given in The Falcon at the time of the shooting. Mr. McCauley and his wife had made up their differences and had been living together for about five months when on Saturday afternoon before the shooting she left and went to the home of her father. Mr. McCauley went to Mr. Thompson's Monday morning to get his wife to go home which she refused to do and the trouble occured. The shooting was done with a 22 pistol as stated by the Falcon at the time and the evidence failed to show that he had a razor.

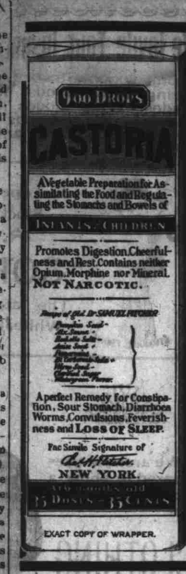

The diver dies without air to breathe. The consumptive dies without lungs to breathe the air, or of lungs rendered incapable of breathing by disease. The blood as it flows in and out of the lungs indicates the consumptive's progress. As the lungs grow weaker less oxygen is inhaled and the blood changes from scarlet to purple. Oxygen is the life of the blood as the blood is the life of the body.

The effect of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery upon weak lungs is to strengthen them, to enable the full oxygenation of the blood, arrest the progress of disease, and heal the inflamed tissues. Lung diseases have been and are being cured by "Golden Medical Discovery," in cases where deep-seated cough, frequent hemorrhage, emaciation, weakness, and night-sweats have all pointed to a fatal termination by consumption.

"Some years ago I was almost a helpless victim of that dread disease—consumption," writes Mr. Chas. Fross, P. M., of Sitka, White Co., Ind. "I was confined to my room for several months; my friends and neighbors had given up all hope of my recovery, until one day a friend advised me to take Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, and after I had taken the contents of the second bottle I began to improve. After taking six bottles I was, I honestly believe, delivered from the grave and entirely cured. I am now a strong and hearty man."

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets cleanse the clogged system from accumulated impurities.

Roman Candles.

In making Roman candles a cylindrical case is taken and packed with a lot of stars. At the bottom of the case they put some of the composition they put in rockets, and on top of each star is some more of it. By mixing certain chemicals green and red lights are produced. Green lights like those used in death scenes on the stage at the theater are made by mixing a great quantity of nitrate of barytes with small quantities of sulphur, chlorate of potash, charcoal pulverized and arsenic.

An Ancient French Custom.

Anciently in many parts of France when a sale of land took place it was the custom to have twelve adult witnesses accompanied by twelve little boys, and when the price of the land was paid and its surrender took place the ears of the boys were pulled, and they were beaten severely, so that the pain thus inflicted should make an impression upon their memory, and, if required afterward, they might bear witness to the sale.

Statistics About the Lakes.

The following figures obtained from reliable sources show the mean level of the lake surfaces above the mean tide at New York and their maximum depths respectively: Lake Ontario, 246.61 feet, 738 feet deep; Lake Erie, 572.86 feet and 210 feet deep; Lake Michigan, 581.28 feet, 870 feet deep; Lake Huron, 581.28 feet, 750 feet deep; Lake Superior, 601.78 feet, 1,008 feet deep. The deepest water runs very fairly in mid-lake throughout the chain.

The area of water surface in square miles according to Crossman's delineation is as follows: Lake Superior, 31,200; Lake Huron, 23,800; Lake Michigan, 22,450; Lake Erie, 9,960; Lake Ontario, 7,240, or a total area of 94,650 square miles.

HIS HEART'S DESIRE

By Garfield MacNeal

Copyright, 1902, by the S. S. McClure Company

The chimes were still ringing as Tom Hastings sat down in the half darkness of the little church. He had strolled in hoping for temporary release from his bitter thoughts, but the quiet of the place only seemed to rouse his brain to greater activity. Yet he could not think of his story, the story already due at the publisher's. Instead he saw only a girl's face, now sweet and gracious as it had been before the quarrel, now cold and repellent as the past two weeks had shown it.

A strain of music broke the silence. The choir was filing in. Hastings glanced carelessly at the white robed procession. The face of the first boy caught his attention for a moment, serious, spiritual, framed in an aureole of golden hair, an ideal face for a choir boy.

But again his thoughts ran back in the old channels to the quarrel and its consequences. Her work had seemed to go on as usual. She was a successful miniature painter—at least fine carriages often stopped at the doorway of the big studio building, and her room rang with feminine voices. That was the maddening part of it. She lived just across the hall, so he must see her many times a day. He had made up his mind to move. But, then, he had such a beastly lot of traps, or perhaps it was some lingering hope that kept him there.

Some familiar chords on the organ startled him. Was it the offertory already? Yes, and the ideal choir boy was singing alone. His handsome face was flushed, and in his earnestness he waved his sheet of music gently to and fro.

"Oh, rest in the Lord," he sang.

Hastings leaned forward. The words were apparently for him. The absolute certainty of the boy's tones carried conviction.

"And he shall give thee thy heart's desire."

The tender voice went straight to the man's heart and comforted him. Yes, he, too, would wait patiently and perhaps some day he, too, would have his heart's desire. Till then he would wait and work.

The next two weeks went by very differently. Under the press of a new enthusiasm the book seemed to write itself. The last sheet had gone in to the publisher, and he had always worn a smile when he met the girl on the stairs. Her bow was still as freezing, but he only smiled again and hummed the few bars from "Elijah." "And he shall give thee thy heart's desire."

Again Hastings sat in the little church. Perhaps his choir boy would sing for him; but the figure of the small leader drooped. In the glare of the choir lights his face showed white and haggard, while his eyes were swollen from weeping. A wave of pity went over the watching man. It might now be his turn to comfort. The sweet soprano voice was low and broken.

Hastings determined to find the meaning of the change. So he lingered after the service, and a kind faced curate told him the sad little story.

"You mean Jack Haines? He has just lost his mother—consumption—and the poor little fellow is left all alone. He is being cared for by neighbors, but we must find him a place in some charity school."

That delicate child in a charity school! Hastings could not bear the thought of it. The face of the child and his own loneliness helped him to come to a sudden resolution. His voice was very eager as he said, "Let me have him."

And so Jack came to live in the big studio building. Slowly the roses came back to his cheeks. He did not forget the pretty mother who had gone to sleep so quietly, but he haunted this new big brother like a shadow and crept into his arms to cry away the grief that time was trying to heal.

But it worried Hastings that the lad should be so solemn. When he came in and found the boy poring over some big book, he would half laughingly scold him for turning into such a little bookworm. "You need some one to play with, Jack," he would say. "It is bad for you to always be cooped up with an old fellow like me." Tom was only thirty, but somehow he had felt very old and settled since that night.

But Jack always declared that he didn't want to be with any one else, and he was such a shy child that Hastings forbore to press the point.

He was therefore much surprised one afternoon, on coming in, to find the rooms empty. Where could Jack be? As the minutes went by, bringing no boy, he became really anxious. The janitor had not seen him. He was returning from fruitless inquiries when he stopped short at a burst of childish laughter. Could it be Jack? He never laughed like that. But, yes, it was his voice, and it came from the girl's rooms.

Hastings hesitated. And now the girl laughed. It was the same saucy little laugh he had loved so much in the days gone by. It decided him. She had stolen his property and should answer for the theft. He knocked boldly on the door.

Silence. He knocked again. Evidently they did not hear him. So he turned the knob and entered the forbidden chamber.

Surprising sight! On the floor in true Turkish style sat the stately Miss Trevor. On her lap were a big sheet of cardboard and sundry brushes and paints. Her hair was disheveled, and several daubs of color ornamented her cheeks and nose. Over her shoulder in a state of great excitement leaned the truant. Hastings hardly knew him. His cheeks were flushed, and his eyes were dancing as he cried, "Now, that is the way the little monkey swung off by his tail!" His cheek was pressed close to the girl's, and his arm rested lovingly on her shoulder. Evidently she had won his heart too.

Hastings felt a swift pang of jealousy and started forward.

Then they heard him, and Jack sprang up with a cry of delight.

The girl was too loaded down to rise, and so she sat there. Perhaps it was the sudden flood of color to her cheeks, perhaps it was the upward glance of her eyes; at any rate, a sudden light came to Hastings. For a moment he stood there blinded, dazed. Then his customary coolness came to his aid. It was his turn to carry things with a high hand, and he must make the most of it.

His eyes challenged hers as he said: "How long have you been a receiver of stolen goods, Miss Trevor? I am glad to see that you have the grace to blush for your sins, even under your paint."

Jack was quite shocked. "She did not steal me," he protested. "I was lonely, and I was waiting for you in the hall, and she asked me to come in, and I came, and we've had a beautiful time," he added in a joyous outburst.

"That's just as bad," Hastings answered severely. "You mean to say that she enticed you in here."

Jack was speechless. The girl had said nothing.

"You might at least invite me to sit down, since you are so comfortable," Hastings went on, "and let me join in the beautiful time; though I don't know, on second thoughts, that it isn't pleasanter standing. It is so unusual to see you at my feet."

Miss Trevor started to scramble up, but two strong hands lifted her gently into a big chair. It was a new experience to her to be either commanded or [illegible] ... it nor to notice that he was still holding her hands. Both had forgotten Jack as Hastings bent over her and asked, "Are you glad that I have come?"

Jack is delighted with it all, but he never will understand why Tom always calls the girl "Heart's Desire" when her name is Alice.

The Charm of the Suburbs.

The suburbanite cannot get everything, but he takes what he can get. Even as things are he can get a good deal. Half an hour's railway journey—an hour spent in the train out of the day of twenty-four—brings him down to a road of gardens instead of a road of houses. The gardens are small, no doubt, as the houses are small, but the gardens are there. Within the next few years the engineer will run his electric railways and tramways to pass within a hundred yards of his door and he will be transported quietly quickly and cleanly from his suburban garden, his trees and his pure air to the telephones of the office, and quietly, quickly and cleanly back again. It is only the lack of facilities of transport which prevents him even now from enjoying to the full all that the out of town dweller enjoys. When these facilities increase, as they will increase, the word "suburb" will, of course, mean more. But meanwhile it is in the right place. He should not be afraid of the word "suburban."—London Spectator.

A Temperance Story.

"You seem rather hilarious today," the lathe remarked to the buzzsaw.

"Yes," replied the buzzsaw; "the man who runs me brought some whisky into the shop with him a little while ago."

"Well?"

"Well, I took two or three fingers at his expense."—Philadelphia Press.

Attentive to the Duties.

"Yes, I'm one of the trustees of the proposed gallery of art."

"What have you done so far?"

"So far? Why, we've eaten three annual dinners and are preparing for a fourth."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

BEARS WASHINGTON'S NAME

Natural Bridge, Virginia, to Be Added to National Parks.

The natural bridge of Virginia, with its adjacent lands, it is hoped, will soon be converted into a national park. Congressman H. D. Flood of Virginia has introduced a bill into congress to that effect, and this wonderful bridge of rock, on which George Washington once carved his name, will be preserved to the people for all time.

The bridge overlooks the James river valley, being on the western slope of the Blue Ridge mountains and in about the center of Virginia. It is a single block of limestone and spans a wide and deep canyon.

Washington, when a surveyor, visited it and carved his name on a rock near where a rustic bench now affords a resting place for visitors. Close to the name of Washington are those of Marshall, Monroe, Clay, Burton, Jackson, Van Buren and Sam Houston.

The Natural Bridge park is a plateau 1,500 feet above the sea and comprises about 2,000 acres, generously traversed by smooth, safe carriage roads, together with numerous walks and bridle paths. The bridge connects two round topped mountains.

MALARIA An Invisible Enemy to Health

Means bad air, and whether it comes from the low lands and marshes of the country, or the filthy sewers and drain pipes of the cities and towns its effect upon the human system is the same.

These atmospheric poisons are breathed into the lungs and taken up by the blood, and the foundation of some long, debilitating illness is laid. Chills and fever, chronic dyspepsia, torpid and enlarged liver, kidney troubles, jaundice and biliousness are frequently due to that invisible foe, Malaria. Noxious gases and unhealthy matter collect in the system because the liver and kidneys fail to act, and are poured into the blood current until it becomes so polluted and sluggish that the poisons literally break through the skin, and carbuncles, boils, abscesses, ulcers and various eruptions of an indolent character appear, depleting the system, and threatening life itself.

The germs and poisons that so oppress and weaken the body and destroy the life-giving properties of the blood, rendering it thin and watery, must be overcome and carried out of the system before the patient can hope to get rid of Malaria and its effects.

SSS S. S. S. does this and quickly produces an entire change in the blood, reaching every organ and stimulating them to vigorous, healthy action. S. S. S. possesses not only purifying but tonic properties, and the general health improves, and the appetite increases almost from the first dose. There is no Mercury, Potash, Arsenic or other mineral in S. S. S. It is strictly and entirely a vegetable remedy.

Write us about your case, and our physicians will gladly help you by their advice to regain your health. Book on blood and skin diseases sent free.
